

FEATURED ARTIST

ELIZABETH GLOVER

As a digital artist, I wanted to get better at creating artwork digitally. I learned that the professional digital artists I looked up to, had painted traditionally first. So, in an effort to increase my skill, I picked up painting a little over a year ago (specifically oils).

I love painting portraits and figures. Eventually, I would love to paint more elaborate compositions like Norman Rockwell or Phil Hale.

For me, art is the constant pursuit of something greater. A never-ending journey to create or to do something beyond yourself. It's taking inspiration from your surrounding environment and turning it into something tangibly yours. In a sense, every ambition is an art. From the meticulous stroke of a brush to the compelling words of a salesman. Art is a broad term in my opinion, and very hard to put into words.

In my belief, I haven't even begun to create the works I would like to put into the world. Don't get me wrong, I love every piece I am exhibiting, and they have a special room in my heart. But to me, they are the first stepping stones to what I hope to accomplish. That being to take the nonsense inside my head into full reality. Though, I believe all artists have that feeling, professional and beginner. So perhaps even after a million steps, there is no "top" to reach. Even so, I'll continue to climb them to see how far I can go.
