

Meet Gail M. King

Born and raised in Atlanta, Gail attended private school and then Emory University where she majored in psychology. After graduation, she married the Georgia Tech quarterback, and they had three children and continued to live in Atlanta.

Gail had lots of different jobs over the years, but never a real calling. When her husband passed away in 2004, she moved to their beach home on the Georgia coast. She lived there for 14 years and then moved to Serenbe when her son and daughters built the Textile Lofts. They now run the commercial real estate company of her late husband, Kim King.

Gail has always thought of herself as "nature girl". She loves the outdoors and the country life. She started painting in 2018 at a plein air workshop at the beach. Previously, she had never drawn or painted anything except walls.

Gail found her calling at 70 years old and now paints several days a week with other artists in the Paint Space in Serenbe. Her paintings always tell a story and they come from my heart. She loves outdoor scenes, so landscapes make up the majority of her paintings, but she also loves to paint animals and fairies.

Gail says, "My life in Chattahoochee Hills has exceeded my expectations. Being in this beautiful pastoral countryside sure beats the city life."
